

These two pictures were found in a dusty binder at the Marathon, Florida airport air museum, which is located in the Florida Keys. What is interesting about these two pictures is the weathered appearance of this natural aluminum DC-3 aircraft. Most of the surface is lap jointed with raised rivets and the edges of the lap joints and the rivets are all covered with soot.

